Abstract
 The hasukjip ((sic)(sic)(sic)) is a form of small business in the South Korean cities. It consists of a house with a number (small hasukjip has near 10-20 rooms, but big- some dozens rooms or more) boarding rooms. Before the Coronavirus situation, any Korean and foreign students living in hasukjips and Koreans understood hasukjips only as a type of private dormitory, but if we examine the example of changes in hasukjips we can also consider trends in the Korean society. Although hasukjips reflect elements and aspects of the various sides of the life in Korea, Korean and foreign scholars have not undertaken research on the situation of the hasukjip or changes in its history and this institution remains little-known in the Western academic world. This work based on the sociological materials (these interviews took place in 2022). In this sociological interview for persons, who lived in the hasukjips, took part 184 Korean people and 20 foreigners. Moreover, an interview was conducted with masters of the hasukjip. In this event took part 50 persons. Lists of the interview and further information were added as attachments and some written works. Methodological base of research consists of hermeneutic method, method of sociological survey, method of comparative analysis. The research employed a mixed-methods approach to investigate the evolving nature of hasukjips. Primary data was gathered through semi-structured interviews with a significant sample of residents and stakeholders to provide sociological insights into demographic shifts and housing trends. Questions in interviews were oriented not only for persons, who lived in hasukjip, because their answers in future can be useful for study of other aspects of Korean urban studies. Comparative analysis was also undertaken to distinguish the structural and functional differences between hasukjips in Korea and similar housing models abroad. The aim of this article is to consider modern situation of the hasukjip in Korea and abroad, its place in life of the Korean people. Result of research are consideration of positive and negative changes in hasukjip to 2020s. under technical development, social tendencies, economic crisis and pandemic of coronavirus.
